The Gift

Jenny is through with her dishcloth and her dustcloth. She's done with these humdrum tasks. She is so happy she could do a handstand. Now there is nothing left to obstruct her plans.

She hasn't been on a big ship before. What a thrill it will be to walk up that gangplank! It will be strange to look back from the windswept deck to her children.

They'll grin and yell, "Have fun!"
Jenny will say, "Thank you for this gift!"
