Selling The House

Granny was in a rush. She had forgotten to wind the clock when she went to bed and had overslept. Then she mislaid her glasses and was upstairs looking for them when the doorbell rang.

That would be someone who wanted to buy the house. It was awful, but true. This old house was just too big for her. The upkeep needed to maintain its condition was too costly. Granny had to move.

She was not overcome with sadness. Granny will miss the house, but she'll be free to travel when it's sold.
