Lesson 13
READ THIS STORY #2, Advanced

Hackers

Many countries are struggling to develop and maintain computer systems that are capable of protecting secret information.

People have broken into computer systems by unscrambling security codes. It's an illegal activity, and those people are called hackers.

Some hackers wish to prove that they have the ability to crack a mind-boggling puzzle. Others have criminal intentions.

Two young blind brothers attended a computer class. They were so talented that they developed software for the blind, which translates printed letters into different tones.

But police have evidence that they have become hackers. They are now in custody.