The Humpback Whale

Could I entice you to board a ship and take a whale hunting trip? The Humpback Whale has been seen swimming quite close to the West Coast.

While the Big Blue Whale is the most massive animal in the world, the size of the Humpback Whale is still impressive. He can grow to be fifty feet long.

The back of his body is blackish, while the lower half of his flippers and tail are white. His throat and chest are also white.

From a boat, it is rare to see the entire whale at once.
